

Sharing Nature training for nature interpreters, teachers, foresters, independent practitioners and all other nature lovers

By Greg Traymar, International Director, Sharing Nature Worldwide

Sign up for a Sharing Nature training from 11th and 12th May 2018 in hotel Natura in Rogla, Slovenia, organized by Zelena steza, Slovenian Forestry Institute and Sharing Nature Worldwide.

Learn highly effective ways to connect your students and visitors to nature with one of the planet's most widely respected and beloved nature education programs, used by millions of people since 1979. The award-winning Sharing Nature® books and trainings by Joseph Cornell have inspired countless individuals and organizations to deepen their relationship with nature and care for the earth.

This two-day training will give you the skills and confidence to “make education about the environment a joy to teach.” Inspired and joyful learning experiences make ecology not just a concept, but a life-changing shift in awareness. Our proven methods stimulate the mind and touch the heart. During this training you will learn:

- Prize-winning nature activities that make ecological concepts come alive
- Flow Learning™, our outdoor teaching strategy, that gently—almost magically!—guides others to uplifting nature experiences
- Play Principles for multi-faceted learning
- Forest activities that foster a scientific and intuitive understanding of trees
